

Written by Administrator

Monday, 25 October 2010 22:58 - Last Updated Sunday, 31 October 2010 18:00

This report about the UK Border Agency's fact-finding mission to Zimbabwe in August makes very interesting reading. It seems to totally contradict the logic behind the UKBA's announcement that failed Zimbabwean asylum seekers are to be returned to Zimbabwe because the situation is better. It's a long report published without publicity and it now seems to have been taken off the UKBA and UNHCR websites. We have captured it on our website in case it does not reappear.

Since writing the above we have been contacted by the UKBA / Home Office with a request to take this report off our website. They advise us they are in process of making some minor amendments. We have complied with this request.

Friday 29th October: the UKBA / Home Office has put the amended report back on their website (check: http://rds.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/country_reports.html)